State agrees to re-tally scores in office competition

■ Highest scoring West Sacramento site in the first competition was at Lighthouse Marina, on the city's northeastern riverfront

By Steve Marschke

Officials at the state Department of General Services have agreed to re-calculate the scoring in the regional competition for a new California Environmental Protection Agency headquarters -- a move that leaves West Sacramento officials cautiously optimistic.

Several West Sacramento developers submitted bids for the office complex, which was eventually awarded to a site proffered by the city of Sacramento and Maguire Thomas Partners at 10th and I streets in Sacramento. That decision was announced last December.

The highest scoring West Sacramento site was at Lighthouse Marina -- a site ranked fourth overall.

West Sacramento and other losing bidders protested the award, claiming the scoring process (which included costs, proximity to downtown, and other factors) was not consistent. Some even threatened an environmental lawsuit against the project to stall it in protest.

The city's leaders are mildly hopeful about the promised recount.

"I'm glad it's moving forward and finally coming to closure," said Cindy Tuttle, West Sacramento's vice mayor. "If they evaluate the proposals fairly, we'll come out on top."

Tuttle said the Lighthouse Marina proposal provided "the most bang for the buck" and that the original scoring procedure failed to "compare apples with apples."

Bill Farley, Sacramento's economic development manager, told a newspaper last week he too was glad the selection process is "moving to the next step," and that he was confident the Maguire Thomas proposal would again come out on top.

Val Toppenburg, West Sacramento's deputy director of redevelopment, told a newspaper he was glad the state had acknowledged that "maybe the scoring could have been done differently and more appropriately."

The planned new Cal EPA headquarters would occupy 800,000 square feet of office space, consolidating department employees now housed in 21 different Sacramento-area buildings. Construction is expected to generate about 5,000 jobs.

Officials on both sides of the river prize the project as a means to stimulate their local downtown economies. West Sacramento officials hope it could be one of the "anchor" projects in the construction of a future high-density downtown riverfront.

The planned 1.2 million square foot headquarters for the state Department of Health Services (which was part of the same site selection process as the Cal EPA building) has been delayed for financial reasons.

Gunshot victim found, two suspects are arrested

■ Victim appears to have been slain at the rural West Sacramento location he was found

By Steve Marschke

West Sacramento police believe they have solved the murder of a Sacramento man, who was killed by a gunshot wound to the head last week.

The body of David Janssen, 41, was discovered near Jefferson Blvd. and the deep water shipping canal, near West Sacramento's southern limit. An autopsy showed his death was caused by a gunshot wound to the head.

On Monday, two men who lived together on Merkley Avenue in West Sacramento were arrested and charged with both murder and criminal conspiracy.

Arrested were Darrel L. Myers, 47, and Charles Kenneth Sennett, 22. Police Lt. Ron Moore said Tuesday it was not yet known if the two suspects were related to each other.

The department focused on a fast investigation following the discovery of Janssen's body on Friday.

"We started back with where (Janssen) had been, who his friends were and where he had been last seen," said Moore.

It turned out that the victim and two suspects had been involved in "a minor business transaction," Moore added. "They were trying to sell some property of his for him."

After the death, Moore said, "it appeared the victim was missing some personal property. We're investigating whether or not the motive was robbery."

Moore added that the possible murder weapon was recovered during the arrest and is now awaiting lab testing.

Yolo Fair: ready for entries

If you haven't received one, it's not too late to sign up and enter something at the fair.

Entry blanks and premium books are now available at the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, 1414 Merkley Ave.

City, consultants mull plan to 'court' desirable businesses

■ Meager public turnout at hearing to plan which kinds of businesses are best for the future of West Sacramento

By Steve Marschke

Only two citizens showed up for a May 23 city forum on economic development strategy for West Sacramento. But city officials are moving ahead with developing a plan for business attraction.

"That forum was planned to be a good way to gather information from the public," said Bill Daugherty, a management assistant with the city's redevelopment agency. Daugherty helped plan the forum while working as a staff member for the city's economic development advisory commission (EDAC). "It didn't turn out quite like we expected. The forum itself was to give us some insight as to what types of businesses to try to attract to West Sacramento."

But West Sacramento citizens stayed away in droves, despite publicity through local newspapers and through a city mailing to local service organizations and other groups.

Still, the city is proceeding to develop a business attraction plan. Two consulting firms are helping the effort, while trying to determine both what kinds of businesses are likely to succeed in West Sacramento and which kinds are the most desirable to attract.

And EDAC, in its meeting tonight at 5:45 p.m. in the city council chambers, may again raise the issue of how to involve the public in this effort.

"We know from our consultants wat kinds of businesses would work here in town, but the forum was for the citizens to tell us what types of businesses to court, or at least to ecourage to come to town. What industries should we target our efforts to attract?"

Woman reports attack

By Steve Marschke

A Maple St. man was arrested Friday after a transient woman was allegedly handcuffed and sexually assaulted at his residence May 19.

"A 25-year old female reported on the 19th of May that she reportedly had been sexually assaulted and handcuffed, and that the suspect attempted to inject narcotics into her," said Lt. Ron Moore of the West Sacramento Police Department. "She fought, escaped and reported it to us."

56-year old Whitehorn was arrested after an investigation, and charged with false imprisonment, sexual assault, being an ex-felon in possession of a firearm, and possession of drug paraphernalia.

"Rape didn't happen" although it was attempted, said Moore, but he added that the victim says Whitehorn forced oral copulation.

Minimizing the theft of your wallet, cards

from the Center of Public Interest Law University of San Diego

The theft of a wallet or purse often means you have lost important identification documents -- your driver's license, credit cards, checks, ATM card, and perhaps even your Social Security card and birth certificate.

Sometimes the thief is interested only in the cash, tossing the rest into the nearest garbage can. Unfortunately, a more likely scenario is that your "papers" are used by someone to take on your identity and make purchases using your credit cards and checking account.

Some victims have even discovered that the thief has opened new accounts with the telephone company and utilities, of course, failing to pay the bills at the end of the month. You may find that your credit rating is ruined because of someone's fraudulent spending spree.

Take these preventive steps to minimize losses in case of theft:

1. To minimize the amount of information a thief can steal from you, do not carry your Social Security card, birth certificate or passport in your wallet or purse, except when you have a specific reason to do so.
2. Do not put your address on your key chain so that if you lose your keys, the thief cannot then track your keys to your home or car.
3. Keep a list of all your credit cards, the account numbers, expiration dates and telephone numbers of the customer service departments in a secure place (not your wallet or purse) so you can quickly contact your creditors in case your cards have been stolen. Do the same with your bank accounts.
4. When creating passwords and PINs (personal identification numbers), do not use the last four digits of your Social Security number, your birthdate, middle name, pet's name or anything else that could easily be discovered by thieves.

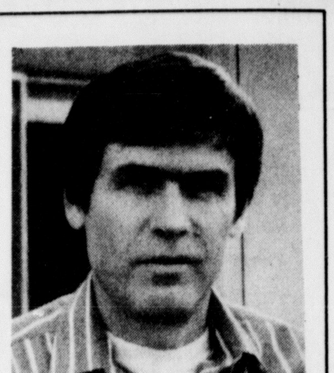
Women in my family protest my wardrobe: T-shirt & cords

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

My wife and daughter cornered me the other night and politely suggested that maybe it was time for me to consider updating my wardrobe.

"What are you talking about?" I asked with genuine surprise. "I've got plenty of everything."

"But Dad," my daughter tried to explain tactfully, "that's part of the problem. You've got plenty of all the wrong things."

"Look," I said, "it's probably true that I don't have to live in fear of being named the best dressed man in West Sacramento, but I'm perfectly happy with my clothes, thank you very much. What's the big problem?"

"Let's see, where should we start?" my wife asked my smiling daughter.

"How about with his shoes?" she answered. "Then we can work our way up from there."

"And just what's wrong with my shoes?" I asked.

"Well, to begin with," said my wife, "you've only got one pair--and Lord knows how old they are."

"A person can only wear one pair of shoes at a time," I tried to explain. "I put some polish on them now and then and they look as good as new. And just because you guys have shoes coming out your ears doesn't mean I should. Plus I'll have you know I have two pairs--you forgot to count my Reeboks."

"Which are even older than your black shoes," said my wife, shaking her head.

"And what about your pants, Dad?" asked my daughter. "That's what really bothers me."

"But I have tons of pants."

"But except for that one pair of blue jeans, they're all cords!" she exclaimed. "Black ones, grey ones, brown ones, even a pair of white ones. I actually had a dream the other night that I got married and you gave me away wearing your white cords."

"You're making that up," I said.

"And when's the last time you bought yourself a new dress shirt?" asked my wife.

"Summer's here," I said. "Who needs a bunch of new shirts? I'm going to be wearing T-shirts for the next two or three months."

"Dad," said my daughter in exasperation, "you don't even own a suit."

"But I've got a couple of sports coats," I said in my defense.

"And the slacks you wear with them are so old they shine," said my wife.

The fact of the matter is that I have never understood the importance most people place on their clothes. In the summer when it's hot, we don't really even need them, and in the fall and winter, as long as they keep me warm and comfortable, I don't much care what they look like.

It seems to me that almost everything to do with clothes is designed to make a person miserable. First, you have to go buy them. That means you have to hang around in crowded malls where you can never find a parking space, where the help is always too busy to wait on you, and where there's so much to choose from you can never make up your mind. Then -- if you finally do find something you like -- you have to try it on, which means disrobing in a strange place with curtains that never fully close and struggling with a bunch of tags, pins, buttons, zippers and hangers. Then -- without your shoes on -- you have to wander around in search of a young girl half your age and ask, "Well, do you think these things fit?" They always say yes -- even if you've picked out something a size or two off -- and assure you that everything will be just fine once you wash it a few times. The next required question is, "And how do you think they look?" What is she going to say -- "Well, sir, to tell you the truth, that particular outfit you've selected actually makes you look like an idiot!"

Anyway, over the years, I have found it much easier and less time consuming to simply find one kind of shirt and pants I like, memorize the size that fits, and every four or five years, buy a half-dozen or so of them in different colors. It works for me, and makes the whole process a lot less intimidating.

Most of the women I know, however, seem to see shopping for clothes in a completely different light. They actually look forward to it -- plan whole days (even weekends) around it -- and in some cases, turn it into kind of an art form. They painstakingly match colors to produce coordinated outfits, pick out just the right pair of shoes to bring the whole thing together, and can even figure out if a dress fits by just holding it up on its hanger in front of them.

I'm afraid it all goes over my head, but as Jerry Seinfeld says, how can you hope to understand people who can pour hot wax on their legs, rip the hair out by the roots, and still be afraid of a spider?

'Braves' play again Thurs.

The "Braves," representing West Sacramento Little League, won the first game of the regional tournament of champions this week and will move on in tournament competition.

The Braves defeated Larchmont, 2-1. They will play again Thursday night at 6:00 p.m. at Fulton-El Camino against Rio Linda.

The Braves, a senior league team, are coached by Gene Schlauch, Alex Romero, Steve Moore and Dean Schlauch, and managed by Mike Coen.

The name of player Aaron Coen was inadvertantly left out of the caption of the team picture in last week's News-Ledger. The News-Ledger regrets the error.

RCHS tennis has good season

By David Brooks

This year's tennis team at River City High School recently completed the most successful season at RC since 1991. Led by singles players Marg Carangue (9 wins at #1 boys singles); Hoang Truong (7 wins at #1 girls singles); and Chanthaphone Inthirath (7 wins at #2 girls singles).

The team won six matches this spring, including a stunning 5-2 win at John Swett. The Raiders were down 1-2 with four matches remaining. All four went into the third set and RC won them all. Truong's 7-5, 6-7 (1-7), 6-4 victory was the longest girls singles match (35 games) in school history -- more than 1000 matches! Veteran doubles players Justin Slutts and Ty Fisher went 4-4; freshman Khonthavy Phouanglasy won six matches in girls doubles; and Peter and Mirthala Santizo won a combined 10 doubles matches. At the S.C.A.L. tournament at Silverado Country Club in Napa, six of the ten RC entries reached the quarterfinals, the school's best showing in its 4 years in the league.

Of the team's 19 members, only Carangue and Slutts will be lost to graduation, so the future looks very bright. Many of the players are currently playing on the West Sacramento USTA jr. summer league team in preparation for the 1995 season.

The Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

The World of Soccer started on Friday with the defending champion Germany squeaking by Bolivia 1-0 and South Korea scoring two goals in the last ten minutes to tie Spain.

The United States played to a 1-1 tie with Switzerland. The last two upsets of the day came when Ireland beat Italy 1-0. the Irish were 0-6 against the Italian team, which is a four-to-one favorite to win the World Cup. The other upset involved Rumania and Colombia.

The Colombians went undefeated in their Cup warm-up games, only to lose to Romania 3-1.

That's bad news for the US team because the talented Columbians will be out to score the points needed to advance to the second round of play. Each team receives three points for a victory and one point for a tie. The top teams in each group go on to a single elimination round in July.

The Mexican national team lost a heartbreaker 1-0 to Norway. The Mexican team is in group E, which is called the group of death, is faced with beating Italy or Ireland to advance to the second round.

An announced crowd of 81,061 at Stanford Stadium watched Brazil shutout Russia 2-0. Brazil is a 3-1 favorite to win the Cup but if you haven't seen the Brazilian style of soccer you're missing a thing of beauty.

The Giants are still struggling and trail the Dodgers by six games, and to make matters worse they added two more pitchers to the disabled list. mark Portugal pulled a groin muscle and Mike Jackson has a very sore right elbow. The Giants signed Darryl Strawberry for the rest of the season and hope to add Robby Thompson and pitcher Bud Black to the roster next week.

The A's won six games in a row and their pitching has been holding down opponents to under three runs a game! Mark McGwire is back and the A's are on a roll.

Last week, I predicted the NBA finals would go seven games. Well, on Wednesday in Houston the season came to a close with game seven.

The Rockets are four-point favorites to win the title, but I still think the Knicks defense will slow down Houston's guards. New York 92, Houston 89!!

See ya next week!!

News-Ledger Editorial

Scams & stuff

It's a predatory world out there. Both consumers and businesses need to be on the constant lookout for scams.

The News-Ledger recently received what looked like an invoice from a South Sacramento check writing system company; complete with a pull-out statement for $167.40 to cover 12 months of check writing services.

The language on this pseudo-invoice was clear -- it was really just an application for services, and not a real invoice. No agreement for services between the News-Ledger and this company had ever been made. But if you send such a notice to enough businesses, enough of them will certainly misinterpret this "application" (and send you their $167.40) to make the tactic worthwhile.

This isn't the most dishonest scam out there. If the appearance was deceptive, the language was not. Other schemes out there (especially those performed over the phone) are more brazen.

For instance, every few months the News-Ledger and other businesses receive a phone call from someone who asks for the make and model of our copying machine. When this information is provided, the caller will announce that there is currently a special price available on supplies for that copier, and we may wish to stock up. The caller implies that his company is our regular supplier.

If asked, he will give a company name. If asked, he will also defend the call and insist that his company is indeed our regular supplier. But once, when pressed for more detail, he simply put the phone on hold awhile and then hang up.

It's a scam; they're hoping that whoever answers the phone for the targetted business is naive enough to place a big order on some inferior supplies from a fly-by-night company.

Police and fire unions often make themselves a party to some telephone huckstering of a different kind. They use solicitors to raise money for their associations' activities. Many of these solicitors are legitimate, but some border on larcenous.

The labor unions are often tempted by these telephone soliciting companies which offer to raise money for them at no cost or effort to the union. But the catch, quite often, is that more than 90 percent of the solicitor's "take" goes to the solicitor, and perhaps 10 percent the union.

So some senior citizen may pledge $10 to support the charitable activites of a local firefighters group, and never realize that $9 of that donation went instead to the pitchman and his boss.

It pays to ask for details in writing before making such a pledge.

When social security checks fall into the wrong hands

by Douglas A. Kaplan
Public Guardian, Conservator, Administrator
Yolo County

The local newspaper's headline asserts, "Puente Guilty of Killing Three." The story of the Sacramento boarding house operator with a criminal record who murdered and buried her victims while she continued to cash their Social Security benefits shocked our local community.

The 60 Minutes May 1 program, "Easy Money," decried how alcoholics and drug addicts are dying from the misuse of their lump sum retroactive Social Security payments, by abusing the funds and drinking or using drugs to such excess that they cause their own deaths. "Easy Money" profiled how bartenders and drug addicts are appointed representative payee, only to use the funds to purchase drugs or alcohol for the intended beneficiary.

These and other similar stories are graphic examples of the failure of our current system of delivering retroactive social security checks to irresponsible individuals acting as representative payees for disabled persons.

The societal problems of alcoholism, drug addiction, mental illness, and financial exploitation of persons afflicted with them, are issues we now must face together.

The current lack of responsible individuals to act as representative payees to properly administer Social Security benefit checks only compounds these problems. What is necessary to meet this problem head on is the establishment of professional representative payees to manage the money of alcoholics, drug addicts, and the mentally and physical disabled. As president of the National Guardianship Association, I have been working with the Congress to reform the current system and solve many of the problems depicted by 60 Minutes and the horror of Dorothea Puente's boarding house.

House Resolution 4277-Jacobs, "The Social Security Administrative Reform Act of 1994," will assure that taxpayer funds are properly spent, encourage drug and alcohol treatment and reduce homelessness. This legislation would allow nonprofit agencies and local governments to provide professional money management services, by removing benefit checks from the hands of bartenders and convicted felons, and will provide respite to beleaguered family members by managing Social Security checks properly.

The professional representative payee will assure that the beneficiary's rent, utilities, food and clothing needs are paid first each month as required by the Social Security Administration. Professional payees would not give large cash amounts to beneficiaries to abuse. Professional payees would also not be subject to the same intimidations by addicts and alcoholics as many well meaning friends and family members are today.

This legislation would require treatment for addicts and alcoholics in order for them to receive their benefits. For those individuals with additional qualifying disabilities, such as persons with heart conditions, paralysis, cancer, developmental, mental or physical disabilities, benefits would be continued.

Why the high-speed police chase is necessary for public safety

by Commissioner Maury Hannigan
California Highway Patrol

When a pursuit crash takes a life, particularly that of a bystander (in 1993 there were eight such deaths in 7,781 pursuits), the ensuing emotional tide temporarily overwhelms logic. The family that loses a loved one in a pursuit crash reaches for the solace of prevention: "Let's not repeat this needless tragedy. Let's do away with police pursuits." For the California Highway Patrol -- and every police agency that engages in pursuits -- the challenge remains that of keeping the public view of pursuits on an even keel.

I have appeared on Donahue and other high-visibility programs to explain the police position, which I believe should be an extension of what is (or should be) society's position. Pursuits are a critical law enforcement tool. Without the authority to pursue, we submit to the criminal.

Society throws in the towel.

The audacious crime has become routine, and virtually always involves a vehicle. Criminals use cars, criminals flee in cars, and criminals often draw attention to themselves by their flagrant disregard for traffic regulations. Police find themselves in pursuit, with perhaps their best opportunity to apprehend. If police give up pursuit, control of the highways shifts to the criminal.

Media accounts of pursuit crash deaths leave the impression that most pursued drivers have done nothing more serious than failing to replace a burned out taillight. But 75% of the drivers apprehended in CHP pursuits fit one of these three categories. They are: 1) driving under the influence; 2) driving a stolen vehicle; or 3) sought on a felony charge.

It is important to weight the risk. If police back off when a drunk driver flees, then more drunks

Letters to the Editor

Thanks

I would like to take this opportunity to express my sincere gratitude to the citizens of West Sacramento for the support shown me during the recent city council election.

I am grateful for the opportunity you have given me to continue representing your interest and concerns regarding the problems and future growth of our city. I can assure everyone I will work diligently to insure that this city is administered efficiently, economically, and that all city employees are treated equally.

I would like to especially thank stationary engineers local 39, General Laborers local 185, and the West Sacramento Police Officers Association for their assistance.

I look forward to working with everyone to make West Sacramento a city we can all be proud to raise our children and grandchildren in.

Double grads

It is infrequent in most people's lives for wonderful and notable events to occur. But, for the Roger and Lydia Peake family of the Southport area of West Sacramento, such a weekend has arisen.

Nicole Peake, daughter of Roger and Lydia, graduated from the University of California, Davis campus with a degree in design. After her June 19 graduation, Nicole will take some time off and then start graduate school at a yet-to-be-determined university. Nicole graduated from Bishop Manaogue High School, and both Sacramento City College and Cosumnes College prior to transferring to UC Davis. Throughout her two years at UC, Nicole worked 20 to 30 hours per week at Lucky Markets where she is still employed. Through it all, she maintained in excess of a 3.0 grade point average. She may pursue an internship in design in the near future. Nicole is in the process of deciding which specific aspect(s) of the design world will catch her fancy.

On June 18, Lydia Peake, Roger's wife for 29 years, graduated from the University of California, Davis with a degree in anthropology (archaeology emphasis). After a 25-year hiatus, Lydia returned to Sacramento City College, earned an Associate of Arts degree, and transferred to the Davis campus in 1991. She has been accepted into graduate school at Davis to pursue an elementary school teaching credential which she expects to earn by June, 1995. While at UC, Lydia excelled academically and in the breadth of achievement and has been rewarded with election into the Kappa of California chapter of Phi Beta Kappa. Phi Beta Kappa is "the" national honorary fraternity for scholarship. Her election is a fine tribute to a hard-working (returnee) student.

The Peake family will be celebrating these achievements by both Nicole and Lydia.

Signs & fences

At the June 16 planning commission meeting, that board was asked by a local merchant whose business is less conspicuous to passing signs, "including `A' frame signs, sandwich board signs..." It was argued that his neighbor merchants were unwilling to share the costs of a fixed-position, multiple-business sign. This writer suggested that applicant mount a (3-sided) sign stop a vehicle -- as with taxicabs -- and park the vehicle on the street...but the board did not seem to take it seriously. Instead, some research will be done and planning staff will come back to board for recommendations for or for no modifications to current sign code.

On a more emotional issue, there was a debate on the fairness and safety of the rules on 4-foot fences vs. 3-foot fences. The small army of mostly senior citizens argued in favor of what they felt was the much safer (from trespassing) 4-foot fence while planning staff argued in favor of present code which claims that 3-foot fences -- on corner lots -- were much safer (from a traffic standpoint) since most vehicle drivers could see over 3-foot fences but 4-foot fences obscure the drivers' vision to see each other; hence, would cause more accidents. The 4-foot advocates also argued that 3-foot fencing is no longer available, except by special order or custom-made, which costs over twice what 4-foot fencing costs. Should 4-foot -- or foot -- fencing be allowed on corner lots if certain setbacks were made? (Note: We're talking -- generally -- about chain link fencing for front yards and side yards of corner lots. Once again, planning staff was asked to research (more) on this subject and report back to the board. Safety from trespass vs. traffic safety...which is most important? If the fencing costs over $300, should it not require a building permit -- from the planning department? Would not such a permit pave the way to better understandings in the future? And how will insurance (auto vs. homeowners') play a role in this debate...safer homes vs. safer vehicle driving? Motion detection lighting (or sensor lights) makes a lot of sense with or without 4 foot front/front side fencing.

Tibbitts Says News-Ledger Not Here; Claims West Sacramento Not in Yolo!

West Capitol Bids Opening May 23

Bids will be opened May 23 for the long-awaited West Capitol Avenue improvement project, as the result of action taken Monday by the Yolo County Board of Supervisors.

The supervisors, concluding the final public hearing on the project, gave unanimous approval to the $306,824 project which includes the installation of curbs and gutters on both sides of the highway and the construction of a landscaped median strip from Fifth Street in Broderick to Harbor Boulevard in West Sacramento.

Property owners in the special improvement district will pay all of the costs on the project except paving of the street between the shoulders and the curbs and gutters. The county is expected to pay an estimated $136,000 for the paving.

A group of West Capitol Avenue property owners appeared at Monday's hearing and entered objections.

Arne Andersen objected to the amount the county now estimates it will pay for the paving work and contended the owners were led to believe more work would be done. Joey Lopes complained the county had neglected West Sacramento for many years.

The Supervisors gave final approval to the project after agreeing to consider repaving the entire width of the highway if this is found to be necessary.

BIG BOB PORTER (The Babe) hit two consecutive home runs, and also had a single, for 3 for 3, and Steve Snyder followed Bob with another homer in the fifth inning Sunday at McKinley Park as Johnny's Time Out Club of East Yolo scored its second win, 8 to 2, in the Sacramento area Mexican-American hardball league. The win placed JTO alone in first place. JTO defeated Reno Cage in the league opener. This Sunday the local team will play the slow ones at Marshall High School at 1:30, with Jimmy Gonzales as the starting pitcher.

Lore Dormeyer Kin Is New Union Editor

The son-in-law of a former West Sacramento woman will become editor of the Sacramento Union when the Copley Newspapers, Inc., assume ownership of the daily newspaper May 10.

He is James Anderson, 45, who served for 12 years as a member and manager of the Sacramento bureau of United Press International (UPI) in the State Capitol. He will leave his present post as West Coast editor of UPI to take the Sacramento post, according to an announcement made Monday by Carlyle Reed, who will become the new publisher of the Union under its new ownership.

Anderson's mother-in-law was the late Mrs. Lore Dormeyer, who resided here several years and was a noted Northern California artist. Anderson at the time was with the UPI bureau in the Capitol.

Mrs. Dormeyer, who died a few years ago, was active in art circles in and around the Sacramento area and, a few years before her death, made a year-long trip around the world, spending several months painting in European countries.

Assessor's Office To Assist Vets

Yolo County Assessor Marion F. Baker, is reminding veterans who have not yet filed their applications for property tax exemption, and who would like to do so, that the assessor's office at the old Washington school in Broderick will be open from 8 AM to 5 PM Monday through Friday.

The final filing date is Monday, May 2, 1966, until 5 PM.

Firemen Here For Conference

An estimated 500 firemen and their wives from communities throughout the state are scheduled to gather in West Sacramento beginning today, for the annual three day conference of the California Rural Fire Association.

The three day meeting, which will include business sessions, demonstrations of fire fighting equipment and methods and a banquet at which 1966-67 officers will be installed, will be hosted by the West Sacramento Fire Department and the Sacramento-Yolo Fire Chiefs Association.

Headquarters for the conference will be the Hotel El Rancho.

Local, county and Sacramento officials will be on hand to officially welcome the delegates Friday morning, April 29. Events will include demonstrations at the Sacramento-Yolo Port.

The Yolo County Superior Court has taken under submission the petition of the News-Ledger to have its legal status established and ascertained.

The petition was heard in a three and a half hour hearing this morning before Superior Court Judge James C. McDermott, who indicated he will decide the case within the 10 day period required by law.

McDermott will also rule on a motion entered by West Sacramento Attorney Morton L. Friedman, representing Douglas Tibbitts, of Woodland, as publisher of the Woodland Record, to deny the petition.

The petition was filed in superior court last October and the hearing was delayed several times.

Michael P. Garten and Julius Feher, co-publishers of the News-Ledger, appeared in court April 15 to object to a request for yet another continuance requested by Friedman, who told the court in a letter he represented the Woodland Record and the East Yolo Record as objectors.

Garten served as his own attorney in today's hearing and also appeared as a witness, as did Feher.

The News-Ledger publishers testified the newspaper meets all of the requirements of the Government Code and denied the objections entered by Tibbitts, who contended the News-Ledger is not owned and published by Feher and Garten, is not printed and published as required by the code, that it has no list of bona fide subscribers and that it meets none of the requirements of the law.

The objections filed by Attorney Friedman with the court this morning also contend neither the newspaper, its offices nor the community of West Sacramento are located in Yolo County, as stated in the News-Ledger's petition.

In reply in part to the objector's allegations, Feher identified copies of receipts which showed Friedman himself is a paying subscriber of the News-Ledger.

A decree ascertaining the standing of the News-Ledger as a newspaper of general circulation will permit it to accept and publish legal notices and other legal advertising required by law. Such advertising includes delinquent tax lists, official election notices and notices of trustee sales.

The court accepted as exhibits a loosely bound volume of all issues of the News-Ledger published during its first year of operation and a list of East Yolo area residents who became subscribers of the paper during its first two weeks of operation.

BUSINESSES

plied Development Economics (which has worked for the city for several years) is one party involved in this process. Chico-based Chabin Concepts is another.

The West Sacramento City Council has already approved an application to the state for a $30,000 Community Development Block Grant to support a business attraction effort. That sum, if offered, will be matched by $6,300 in local money.

Business attraction has been a key goal for West Sacramento officials as well as most other California jurisdictions, which value both the jobs and tax revenues which come along with new businesses.

Thanks for reading the News-Ledger, West Sacramento's only locally owned, independent newspaper.

We're proud to celebrate our 30th anniversary with you.

Some people create passwords by taking the first letters of the words from a favorite line of poetry, for example, TCJOTM, "The cow jumped over the moon." Others pick a special word (but not a common one), spell it out on the keypad of a touchtone phone, and then use those numbers as the password.

5. Memorize all your passwords. Make sure they are not written down anywhere in your wallet or purse.

If your wallet is stolen or lost, it is important that you act immediately to stop the thief's use of your identity.

Take these steps to recover from the loss of your wallet.

1. Report the crime to the police immediately. Get a copy of your police report. Credit card companies, your bank, and the insurance company may require you to show the report in order to verify the crime.

2. Cancel all your credit cards immediately.

3. Call the three credit reporting companies, TRW, Equifax and Trans Union. Report the theft of your credit cards and ask that your accounts be flagged. Flagging puts credit bureau staff on notice to be aware of possible fraudulent access to your credit report.

4. Order your credit report on a regular basis in order to monitor possible fraudulent use of your credit cards and bank account.

5. Notify your bank(s) of the theft. Cancel your accounts, both checking and savings, and obtain new account numbers. Ask the bank to issue you a secret password that must be used in every banking transaction. Put stop payments on any outstanding checks that you do not remember who they were written to.

6. If you use an ATM card for banking services, get a new card, account number and password. Do not use your old password. When creating a password, avoid such commonly used numbers as the last four digits of your Social Security number and your birthdate.

7. If you have a passport, notify the passport office to be on the lookout for anyone ordering a new passport fraudulently.

8. Call your telephone, electrical, gas and water utilities. Alert them to the possibility that someone may attempt to open new service using your identification. Also contact your long distance telephone carrier.

9. You may want to change your driver's license number if someone has been using yours as identification on "bad" checks. When requesting a new number from the California Department of Motor Vehicles, you might be asked to prove that you have been damaged by the theft of your driver's license.

10. You may also want to have your Social Security number changed if your number has become associated with bad checks and credit. The Social Security Administration is sometimes reluctant to allow the change, so you may need to be insistent.

11. If your keys have been stolen, change the locks on your house and car immediately.

SOCIAL SECURITY

As the solution for the problem presented in "Easy Money," professional representative payees could also be applied to the growing homeless population that receives or qualifies for Social Security, Veteran's or private benefits. The professional payee will be able to apply, receive benefit checks, pay for rent and personal needs for their clients while preventing loss, and will insure that the benefits are used to support the welfare of the individual.

Once the Dorothea Puente boarding house murders made national headlines, Congress passed the Representative Payee Abuse Prevention Act of 1990. Unfortunately, this modest reform is set to expire Jun 30 of 1994. Without positive action, more elderly and disabled will become victims of predatory individuals.

H.R. 4277, now in conference committee, is the solution to the problems presented in "Easy Money." Congress needs to act immediately on this issue, so that the opportunity to protect vulnerable populations and prevent further abuse of taxpayer dollars will not be lost.

will take advantage of the chance to run. Alcohol-related crashes now claim 1,700 to 1,800 lives annually in California. If that total goes up even 5 percent because drunks can avoid arrest by running away, we will sacrifice 80 or 90 lives each year.

The fact is, if we preclude the use of pursuits, far more citizens will be put at risk then is presently the case.

I question media emphasis on the occasional pursuit tragedy with no parallel reference to the hundreds of pursuits that end without incident.

This leaves the public floating on a sea of mistaken impressions, with no anchoring explanation of what happens in most pursuits -- an apprehension, nothing else. The thin veneer of knowledge about how pursuits really work means most people know nothing of the tight controls police put on the process.

Responsible police agencies define when and how pursuits may be conducted, when they should be called off (the CHP aborts about one in five pursuits), and what disciplinary action awaits officers who violate policy.

All of which outlines the need for intensive training. CHP cadet trainees receive 40-48 hours of behind-the-wheel enforcement driving, including a practical problem in pursuit. A driving instructor flees, and the cadet must pursue and apprehend -- safely. Cadets who fail this (or any major element of driver training) don't become Highway Patrol officers.

Police management holds the final key to the proper conduct of pursuits: administrative review of every pursuit -- the ones that go right, as well as those ending in a crash. Highway Patrol pursuit philosophy can be summed up this way: establish a firm policy, train officers thoroughly, review every pursuit, correct mistakes, discipline those who violate policy.

The idea is to rule emotions out of the process, to the fullest extent we can. The officer in a pursuit should be responding to mental calculations, not emotional stimuli.

Training makes that possible; that and the observant eye of concerned management"

But even a well-thought-out policy and superior training won't bring the pursuit crash total down to zero. There will always be a slight risk, just as there is collision risk for anyone who rides in a car.

Abolishing pursuits eliminates the wrong risk. We lose more than we gain. We relinquish control of the roads to the lawless; we back away where we should be confronting. And we increase the chance of tragedy, not diminish it.

Funding available for eligible non-profits

The city of West Sacramento is currently seeking non-profit organizations who can distribute a minimum of fifty percent of donated funds or assistance to benefit residents of the West Sacramento area. These donations currently range from $9 to $110. Each year you must provide the economic development office documentation that states that you are still eligible to receive these funds.

The organizations receiving these in-lieu fees must be a non-profit corporation with federal and/or California not-for-profit standing, must provide emergency assistance, counseling, advice, medical care, instructional services, recreational programs or facilities furnished to individuals or groups in West Sacramento.

Qualified organizations may receive funding through the Employment Economic Incentive Act (EEIA) from businesses who pay an in-lieu fee to local area non-profit agencies for not hiring at least 50 percent of their employees from designated area. The EEIA program is designated until the year 2003.

If your organization is interested in receiving these fees, please submit a brief description of your program with documentation demonstrating that you are a non-profit corporation and provide services to the West Sacramento community.

Additional information regarding the program is available by contacting either Barbara Moore or Bill Daugherty at 373-5843.
